Updating that system would be expensive. A deeper problem is how doctors are evaluated, Bledsoe said. "A big part of how we evaluate a doctor's performance has become patient satisfaction," he said. That factor is part of a metric used by hospitals and clinics, a trend that started in the 1990s, he said. "That certainly needs to be a part of it, but there's a difference between being a good clinician and giving the patient what he wants," Bledsoe said. The studies in the 1980s calling for more aggressive treatment of pain and the trend in the 1990s to emphasize patient satisfaction reinforced one other, Bledsoe said
