"Ask how the wood-flowers waken to the sun,/ Unsummoned save by some mysterious word," says Sappho in Lyric LXVIII, "And you shall know What leads the heart of man/ To the far haven of his hopes and fears." Since the natural patterns whose secrete lid at the heart of Sappho'a musings are those of death and rebirth, departure and return, it is hardly surprising that several of the lyrics in the Cleis-Gorgo Group participate in two distinct patterns of imagery: on the one hand, there is the imagery of autumn and twilight, winter and cold, that connotes the approach of death; on the other hand there is the imagery of spring and morning that connotes the possibility of rebirth
